MEXICAN GOVERNOR STATES HE WILL OPPOSE LANDING OF AMERICAN SEA SOLDIERS ON WEST COAST.

MUCH INTERNAL STRIFE

Different Troubles Among Country's Leaders Lead Wilson to Resume Watchful Waiting Policy.

Nogales, Sonora, June 19.—Governor Maytorena authorized the statement today that the entire force under his command would be used if necessary to resist the landing of American marines on the west coast to protect foreign settlers of the Yaguis valley from Indians now at war. A detachment of nearly 1,000 troops sent to the Yaguis valley yesterday, he said, was dispatched primarily to protect settlers and their crops from Indians, but they had orders to resist any landing of American military forces.

Mexican Muddles. Washington, Mexico, June 19.—Differences between General Carranza and General Obregon, his principal commander, dissensions in the Carranza cabinet and Carranza's removal of his headquarters to the isolated fortress in the harbor of Vera Cruz, all reported to Washington today, brought the Mexican situation into a new focus. Official dispatches to the states department say these developments threaten the solidarity of the Carranza government.

Occupation of Mexico City by General Gonzales and Carranza troops has been postponed, pending the cabinet reorganization. Officials here have no complete indications as yet as to the meaning of the cabinet crisis, but over-night it was said that the situation which may have important effect on the Mexican problem as a whole.

Wilson to Wait. President Wilson intends to wait several weeks for the situation to make itself more clearly before any definite steps are taken in the new policy announced in the recent statement to the factions.

INTERMENT ORDERS CAUSING TROUBLE

Anti-German Riots Cease in England Following Government Orders.—Are Hard to Enforce.

London, June 19.—With the Government's announcement that enemy aliens in Great Britain would be either interned or repatriated, all anti-German rioting stopped and the fickle public attention turned itself to other matters. With the public clamor thus sidetracked, the government likewise quickly turned to other matters, and after a day or two the sudden acceleration in the internment of aliens slackened.

The military authorities are naturally reluctant to have thrust upon them suddenly any larger number of internment cases than can be handled easily in the camps already established, and there has been no move to develop mushroom camps which would soon have to be condemned as unfit. It is also regarded as unwise to permit anything in the nature of overcrowding at camps already in existence. No steps are to be taken to charter additional vessels for purposes of alien internment.

The government's promise to intern or repatriate all enemy aliens is likely to be realized only after considerable delay. Such aliens as are rapidly interned are those who are rapidly being combined of the highways and byways, and only in exceptional cases have known Germans or Austrians been called upon to give themselves up.

A number of men and women who are within the possible scope of the internment order are being dealt with by the Emergency Committee for the Assistance of German and Austrian Refugees. Those who have thus far sought the assistance of this committee have been mostly women, some of them British with German husbands. These women are people who were rendered homeless as the result of recent anti-German rioting. When these homeless ones are not immediately required for internment, they are housed in lodgings in a building provided by the committee and under the nominal supervision of the police.

ASSEMBLY APPROVES OPTIONAL TAXATION OF BANK INCOMES

Bill Is Sent to Engrossment After a Discussion Friday Afternoon. To Reconsider Stempier Bill.

Madison, Wis., June 19.—The optional taxation of income of banks, either directly or by the income tax, was favored in the assembly when by a vote of 22 to 42 yesterday afternoon the bill on this subject was sent to engrossment. The bill provides that in case a bank elects to come under the income tax law it shall pay an income tax of 10 per cent. The bill was opposed by Assemblyman Vint, who claimed it would make a difference of $140,000 in favor of banks in Milwaukee, and Crosby of Clark county. It was championed by Assemblyman O'Brien of Clark county.

The Stempier bill on liquor licenses will come up for reconsideration in the assembly next Tuesday, on motion of Assemblyman Axel Johnson of Dodge county. The senate amendment was concurred in by the assembly, 48 to 20. Johnson sought to have it laid over until next Thursday, but Vint said this would not give sufficient time for the signing and publication of the bill before the granting of new licenses at the end of this month.

The assembly reconsidered and sent back to committee the Marlin bill regarding the law which makes gross negligence the only defense in grade crossing accidents, and took the same action on the Senator Hanson bill providing there shall be no lapse in the contracts of public utilities for the furnishing of service.

The Bennett bill to prohibit the university clinic in Madison to give medical service to citizens of the state, other than citizens of Wisconsin, was approved by a vote of 43 to 28. Assemblyman Carl Hansen said the bill was urged by certain Madison physicians and he attempted to build up a doctors' "trust." He charged these doctors were the most active lobbyists on the scene this year. Assemblyman Crosby opposed the bill on the ground he said, that the public purchased the clinic's apparatus and paid the salaries and should be entitled to consult the clinic without interference by any local physicians.

Assemblyman Kent read a letter from a doctor at Marquette university opposing the bill on ethical principles. The bill was championed by Assemblyman Donnelly of Milwaukee, who said he did not believe citizens should have the right to consult the clinic except upon the advice of physicians handling their cases.

The assembly concurred in the Fairchild bill providing for the clubbing of regaining licenses withheld under the Baker law ruling, with a provision that the law's limit shall not be exceeded.

NEW BOXING LAWS SIGNED BY PHILIPP

Any City in the State May Now Hold Contests Providing Sanction of the City Government Is Secured.

Madison, June 19.—Governor Philipp has signed the Hidding bill revising the state athletic commission power to limit the number of club fights and all bouts in any city and providing that in all cities but Milwaukee, the common council may tolerate and regulate boxing bouts. In Milwaukee the commission has complete authority.

The Hambrecht bill permitting cities to make appropriations to aid in the construction of municipal development, and the Minkley bill providing that before a room is a hotel or other public place is repapered or recalcined the old paper or paint must be removed.

WORKMEN DEMANDING HIGHER WAR WAGES

Federation Head Declares That Employers Are Reaping Large Profits and Should Share Gain.

London, June 19.—The reason why the workers who maintain at their places in Britain are demanding pay for war bonuses is explained by Secretary Robert Williams of the National Transport Workers' Federation. He says that while the need of the workers is to meet the increased cost of living, the employers are reaping exceptionally large profits, instead of suffering from the increased cost of living. He said the Seamen's union have gone to the war, the merchant ship owners are operating to such advantage that they charge six times the normal sums for carrying freight. While 750,000 tons of goods are being carried in Britain's defense, the millers have increased their profits four-fold.

In his case against the ship-owners Williams points out they now have no serious competitors in the carrying trade of the world, and that as a result of the elimination of German ships, the freight rates between Argentina and British ports had jumped from $2 and a fraction to $20 and around $17. Another instance of profit to ship owners was that a certain cargo steamer built in 1910 at a cost of $85,000, a recent order sold for $120,000 and a second order for $150,000, an increase of 76 per cent over the original price.

While the ship-owners complain of unfair treatment by the Admiralty, which has taken over many merchant ships as transports, the arbitration board which has settled disputes in these matters consists almost entirely of ship-owners. As the Admiralty is appointing shipping prospects looked exceedingly dull and the owners clamored for Government service. A rental of nine shillings six pence per ton gross register was offered upon, with a discount of six pence a ton for vessels employed for more than one month, and another six pence off for vessels employed more than two months. Since then the ship-owners have demanded not only that they be given an increase of two shillings six pence over the contract scale—or instead of losing 25 they have asked for an increase of 60.

SOUTHWEST FEARS FLOOD AFTER STORM

WEATHER BUREAU ISSUES BULLETIN WARNING RESIDENTS OF LOWLANDS TO TAKE NEW QUARTERS.

YOUNG GIRL A HEROINE

Swims For a Mile in Swollen Streams to Save a Boy Who Was Prostrated by Lightning Stroke.

Kansas City, June 19.—Thunder storms prevailed over Kansas and this section today, causing fears of floods. All Kansas streams are at a dangerous stage and heavy precipitation should be disastrous. The Kansas river here necessary fifteen feet and six inches at nine o'clock this morning, a rise of one foot six inches since yesterday. At Topeka the same condition exists and great fears are felt there. Delayed reports from the scene of Thursday night's storm in Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma confirmed reports of property damage and narrow escapes from small tornadoes, but the death list did not increase, and is still at nineteen.

Leaves Flood Warning. The government weather bureau today issued a warning to residents of the east and west bottoms of Kansas City to move immediately from the first to the second floor of their dwellings and be prepared for a flood. The tributaries in the section of the city adjoining the banks of the Kansas and Missouri rivers, because of recent rains, are rising rapidly.

Most of the foreign laborers employed at the packing houses live in the west bottoms. The district also contains many of the big wholesale houses and this morning hundreds of clerks were engaged in carrying goods from the basement and first floor to the higher stories. A foreign colony of truck gardeners inhabit the east bottom. Here the Missouri river is actually spreading from its banks. The small farmers in the menaced district today were preparing reluctantly to leave home for higher ground. Most of them own their little patches of ground.

Young Girl Is Heroine. Bertha Hupe, aged 17, swam through the swollen water of the Vermilion river, near Wagoner, in an attempt to rescue a boy who had been struck by lightning and killed. Nichols and stung the boy and girl with him. ## VON BETHMAN-HOLWEG CONFERS WITH BERNSTORFF'S ENVOY WHO MAY LATER SEE EMPEROR.

Tells Berlin Official That American Public Sentiment Stands Firm With President Wilson—Opposed to War.

Berlin, via London, June 19.—Dr. Anton Gerhardt, who last reported to Foreign Minister Von Jagow, Dr. Elfred Zimmermann, under secretary of foreign affairs, and Count Montenegro, secretary of the American foreign office acquainted the officials with the status of public opinion in the United States was given an appointment to make a similar report today to Chancellor Von Bethman-Holweg, before the actual work is commenced of preparing the German reply to the second United States note regarding submarine warfare.

Whether Dr. Meyer-Gerhardt, sent to Germany by Count Von Bernstorff, ambassador to the United States, will visit headquarters and present this fact to Emperor William in person, has not yet been decided. In any case, the German reply probably will not be ready for delivery in less than ten days, or two weeks.

Extended conferences will be required to unify the views of the foreign office, ministry of marine and the various departments of public opinion. These conferences and deliberations have not yet begun, and there is nothing to show what direction the current of German policy ultimately will take. It still is an open question whether the reply will be another ad interim or a definite rejoinder.

It may be stated regarding Meyer-Gerhardt that the information brought by him contained little which was absolutely new to the foreign office and its chief value lay in presenting a report of the strength of the various currents of public opinion of the United States and his attitude of President Wilson and his advisers, in a more positive and concrete form than could have been possible in written communication.

He is understood to have made it clear that there is no doubt that the American people are solidly standing behind the guarantee against violation of such an incident as the sinking of the Lusitania and but equally little doubt that no important section of the American people favor war if it can be avoided honorably.

WARREN A. PATRICK ENDS HIS LIFE AT LATE HOUR FRIDAY

Former Janesville Resident Returns to His Apartments in Chicago, After Mysterious Absence and Takes Poison.

Warren A. Patrick, former resident of Janesville, who has been prominent in theatrical and circus publications in Chicago for some years past, ended his own life late Friday afternoon by drinking a quantity of level emulsified carbide acid in his apartments, 636 East Fifty-Fifth street, Chicago. The remains will be taken to California, Mo., the former home of his wife, for interment.

Much mystery surrounds the death of Mr. Patrick. He disappeared from his home on June 5th and the police and Chicago newspapers have been conducting a search for him. Clues had been found by detectives, but his whereabouts could not be learned nor could he be located. Late Friday afternoon he was found in the neighborhood of his home in a dazed condition and died shortly after six in his own apartments without giving any accounting of his mysterious absence.

Warren A. Patrick was the son of Mrs. Mary Clithero of East street. Before entering the circus business as a press agent, he was a circus performer. He was employed on the Janesville Record. After several years with the Ringling show, Mr. Patrick joined forces with the Barnum and Bailey circus, being connected with the privileges. Later he became Chicago representative for the Bill Board and some ten years ago started the Show World, a publication devoted to amusement interests. Selling his interests in this publication, he became western representative for the New York Clipper, which position he held at the time of his death.

He was married some years ago and his widow and a thirteen year old daughter are left to mourn his loss. His wife, Mrs. Mary Clithero, and daughter, Miss Alice Clithero, left this morning for Chicago on being notified of his death. Mrs. George Clark of Johnsonville, a sister, Howard Clithero of Chicago, a brother, and George T. Clithero of Chicago, are the immediate members of the family. Two uncles, Charles and Mrs. William Eastman of Oak Park, Illinois, and Mrs. Geo. F. Howell of Rockford, are other immediate relatives.

General services will be held in Chicago Sunday afternoon. Howard and Robert Clithero, the latter before here on his vacation, going to Chicago this evening. The interment will be at the cemetery of Oak Park, Ill. According to the Chicago authorities, Mr. Patrick had been missing since June 5th and except for statements that he had been seen at various times on the South Side since then, no actual trace of him could be found. He returned to the vicinity of his home as mysteriously as he disappeared in a dazed condition and was unable to tell where he had been or what he had been doing. He died within an hour and a half after the doctor's examination from a dose of lysol, a virulent poison.

NAVY EXPERTS HOPE TO PROTECT DREADNAUGHTS FROM SUBMARINES, SAYS DANIELS.

Work Will Be Started Immediately on "California," First Battleship to Be Equipped With Electric Propulsion.

New York, June 19.—That the navy department experts are now experimenting with a device by which it is hoped to protect future American dreadnaughts against submarine attacks, were revealed here today by Secretary Daniels by a speech at the launching of the battleship Arizona at the Brooklyn navy yards.

After describing the work done on three or five dreadnaughts, authorized by the navy by the last congress, the secretary said:

"The studies are at present considering the best general type for the two remaining authorized dreadnaughts, while experiments are being made with a view to their protection against submarine attacks. They have proved so deadly in the European war."

To Work on California. "As soon as the Arizona leaves the ways, we will begin the actual construction work upon the California, much of the material for which has already been contracted for, and which will be equipped with electric propulsion, being the first of the modern dreadnaughts of any country to utilize this recently tested and successful new motor power, which promises to be a revolutionary invention. It is estimated that by its use the oil burning California steaming at twelve knots will be able to steam for eleven days longer than a coal-burning dreadnaught. And this additional time she could go more than 3,000 miles further. This contemplates her using only her normal bunker supply, but with her emergency bunkers full, she could steam for a week or more further. In other words, the California will be able to steam about twice as far as the Wyoming."

The secretary said that the "backbone" of the navy is still the powerful dreadnaught, but declared the navy was keeping abreast of progress in the building of the submarines and destroyers, which are referred to as the laying of the keel at the Long Island navy yards today of the largest transport yet authorized by congress and of the development of the navy aviation.

Chrestening of Arizona. Washington, June 19.—The fifteen million dollar battleship Arizona was launched for the American navy today when the superdreadnaught Arizona slid into the water at the New York navy yard. Navy yard officials to the Pennsylvania, recently launched at Newport News, and in size and armament one of the largest and most powerful craft ever built for any navy.

Ships of the line, like the Arizona, are built to give and receive punishment in sea battles. Their mission here is to fight against the power of the battle cruisers, which have been the largest ships to engage each other during the European war. Speed is sacrificed in the construction of the battleships to weight of armor and against such a ship as the Arizona with her broadside fire from twelve 14-inch guns and protection of more than a foot of the toughest steel that can be made around the vessel's vital parts like a wall, a battle cruiser would be helpless and must depend on her speed and seek safety.

THRILLING BATTLE BETWEEN AVIATORS

French Aviator Finally Brings Down German After Making Three Attacks.

Paris, June 19.—The following official account of an engagement between a French and German aeroplane was given today:

"An enemy aeroplane having been observed near our lines at Asbach in upper Alsace one of our aviator sergeants took wing and mounted in fifteen minutes to a height of 10,000 feet. At this altitude he engaged his enemy with a machine gun.

"To this the German replied with his machine guns and one of his bullets struck the motor of the French machine. The French aviator descended to a position above his adversary and fired three bands of cartridges. During the third raid the German aviator was seen by the Frenchman falling and the machine then began to fall and it came down like a stone inside of our line.

"The French aviator came down under control, landed on the ground, he examined his machine, and ascertained that the bullets fired by his antagonist had penetrated the steel shield at the back of the motor, penetrated the cylinder and ripped the periphery. The Frenchman himself was slightly wounded in the neck."

FELSH'S HOMER WINS GAME FOR WHITE SOX

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Philadelphia, June 19.—Happy Felsch showed one of his Milwaukee games Friday, when he busted a homer in the fourth inning of the game between the Sox and the Athletics, with the bases loaded to the Sox. The blow settled the game, for it put the Sox away ahead of the league champs and the final score 11 to 4.

The Sox were leading by a scant run when the homer was pelted off. Joe Bush was the victim of the drive and was chased by Mack. Mack of allow on of the critics named Davis, on the mound. The Sox had Davis badly fussed and the Chicago nine scored four more. Opposed to the Athletics, Red Faber pitched, and the Sox hurled a record winning streak. Two errors by Weaver allowed the Macks to score in the first and in the eighth.

Cardinals Infield Will Be Composed of Nehr, Cornett, Croak and Push Miller Sunday.

A big turnout of the loyal Janesville fans is forecasted for the combat Sunday afternoon at the Association Park when the Janesville Cardinals and the Rock Island, Illinois, nine clash for diamond honors. One of the strongest teams that has represented Janesville in recent years will be put in the field against the invaders and prospects appear bright for a victory as Butters is in prime form for a hurling duel.

Nehr is expected to perform at first, although Manager Caldwell may spring a surprise and put Nehr in the outfield and have the initial sack covered by a new first baseman. Negotiations are pending to sign Merkle for the Cardinals as an infielder. Merkle is a classy short stop and a sweet hit, and with him the Cardinals would have a better sticking team—the one department in which they have shown a weakness. Croak is billed for short, but if Merkle is secured, the Albany player will be shifted from short to second, replacing Cornell. Miller will be at third Sunday and much is expected of him in the way of speed and hitting.

In the game with Albany the Cardinals declare that if Hall had been behind the bat receiving Chamberlain, there would have been a decided change in the score for the majority of the ballers were made on passed balls. Chamberlain held Tullie about even in the hurling honors but for the bad boots. Sunday, Butters will do the hurling honors with Chamberlain ready to give the Rock Island men some southpaw twirling if needed.

Sure, this world is full of trouble—I ain't said it ain't. Lord! I've had enough and double Reason for complaint. Rain an' storm have come to fret me. Skies were often gray; Thorns an' brambles have beset me. On the road—bad, say, Ain't it fine today!

What's the use of always weepin', Makin' trouble last? What's the use of always keepin' Thinkin' of the past? Each must have his tribulation, Water with his wine, Life it ain't no celebration. "Trouble" I've had mine— But today is fine.

It's today that I am livin', Not a month ago, Havin' losin', takin', givin', As time willa it so. Yesterday a cloud of sorrow Fell across the way, It may rain again tomorrow, It may rain—bad, say, Ain't it fine today!

—Douglas Malloch.

The homely philosophy contained in this little poem is worth adopting by all of us. Life presents three attitudes and all of them are occupied to greater or less extent.

People who have reached the shadow period, resting after the busy years of active service, devote a good deal of time to living over again the experiences of other days, and memory harks back to the old home, whose founding meant so much in the way of struggle and sacrifice.

The old mother sits with folded hands, and her kindly face lights up with a smile as she calls back the children, whose birthday she so well remembers. Then she closes her eyes, and the day dream seems so real, that the companion of other years, and the little voices which brought melody to her heart, are with her in spirit. This is living in the past, and while it may be a morbid existence, it is not an uncommon experience.

The other extreme is at the other end of the line where a great army of children and young people, filled with hope and fired by ambition, impatiently wait for the slow flight of time to place them in the active ranks of the world's busy toilers.

If the boys and girls of today could have their wishes gratified they would swap the next five years and jump headlong into the arena of womanhood, and immediately assume the responsibilities of mature life.

It is well for them, as well as for the world which they are to enter, that this is not possible. There was never a time when preparation for life was more important than it is today, and there was never a time when opportunities for preparation were so abundant.

The next generation, with thoughts centered on the future, is none in the primary department, and while the discipline may be annoying, and the tasks irksome, they are the foundation on which the structure known as success is built, and rebellion or neglect means failure before the race is begun.

The graduating classes of the land are now confronting the future, in which they have so long been living. The days of preparation, so far as the school room is concerned, are of the past, and the years of restraint and protection, which the home provided, will soon become a memory.

Their hopes have been realized, and the tardy passage of time has at last brought them face to face with full-fledged life. They are like the young robins which flutter about our lawns, in quest of food, when the mother bird has turned them adrift to shrink for themselves.

It may not be out of character to say that the young birds never score a failure in their efforts to make a living. Once out of the nest and afield for themselves, they soon become self-supporting and are no longer a source of anxiety to the old home.

The thought suggests itself that some parents might study bird life to advantage. Too many children never mature until years after the maturing period, because the home coddles them through the years when they should be out shifting for themselves.

As parents, if we consulted our own happiness our children would never marry, and never leave home. We don't like to recognize the time when John becomes a man, or when Mary has arrived at the stage of womanhood. It would be mighty pleasant if we could keep them with us always, but that would be abnormal.

Next to a funeral in the family is the day when we say good-bye to our children, however promising their outlook, but the welfare of the child is of first consideration, and the child needs the rough and tumble experience of life, just as much as we need it. History repeats itself with monotonous regularity, and observation is a safe teacher.

Between the extremes of age, with thought centered on the past, and youth, living so largely in the future, is the great rank and file of humanity struggling for existence. For this class of worried toilers the little poem was written, as a word of encouragement.

The past, however checkered, is of the past. Regrets can't change it, and except to profit by its experiences, the only wise thing to do with it, is to forget it. Living in the past is neither wholesome nor profitable. The money we lost last year will never come back by thinking about it, and the mistakes recorded will always remain a matter of record. It is a source of constant regret, to some people, that "things ain't as they used to be," and much good time is wasted over this imagined calamity. The father likes to tell his boy of his early hardships and the mother sometimes consoles the girl by suggesting that life was not always a round of pleasure.

The pessimistic citizen regales you with a story of the kind of government the city enjoyed forty years ago, and feels it a hardship because he can't pasture his cow in the street. While the man with an overdose of optimism, paints the future in such glowing colors that you feel inclined to wait for its unfolding.

The time to live is today. Not yesterday, however pleasant may be its memories; nor tomorrow, however hopeful may be the outlook. While our plans should reach out into the future, the work of today is the important work, and the life of today the only life we are sure of.

The age in which we live is an age of rich inheritance. We enjoy the fruits of toil and sacrifice in abundance. Invention and discovery fill the lap of the present generation to overflowing.

The horseless vehicle is no longer a luxury, and the price is soon destined to be within the reach of modest incomes. The telephone is so common that neighborhood gossip at long range is the accepted method, while the government serves us as a common carrier at moderate prices.

There is so much crowded into the life of today that the man who lives out expectancy enjoys a richer experience than Methuselah and his neighbors, who tarried for half a dozen centuries or more.

In a broader sense we are Americans, and that means more than it ever meant before in the world's history, in both privilege and responsibility. In the June issue of the "Fra" is an article by the late Elbert Hubbard. One of the last things that he ever wrote. The following paragraph is quoted:

"America has everything that God has ever given to His children, and she is abundant. We have the land, rich beyond the dreams of the average, which only needs to be tilled with a hoe to laugh a harvest.

"We have the glorious sunshine, the running waters, the winds that invigorate.

"We have the schools, the shops, the railroads, the steamship lines. All these must be bettered, strengthened, braced against any possible disaster. And all of all we have the men and women, the healthy, happy, rollicking children.

"We have the willing hands, the cunning brain, the desire to do and dare, the ambition to express ourselves."

Life today, in this fair land, is a priceless heritage, not fully appreciated. The world is suffering untold agony for the peace which we enjoy. The close relations of life in the home is the sacred precinct, and the happiness of the home depends upon how we treat it today. The clouds of yesterday should be permitted to roll away, and the plans for tomorrow should not interfere with the joy of today, to which every home is entitled. The sentiment expressed in the following little poem is worth adopting:

With every rising of the sun
Think of your life as just begun.
The Past has cancelled and buried deep
All yesterdays. There let them sleep.

Concern yourself with but today.
Grasp and teach it to obey.
You'll win, and plan. Since time began
Today has been the friend of man.

You and Today! A soul sublime
And the great heritage of time.
With God himself to bind the twain,
Go forth, brave heart! Attain! Attain!

COLLEGE GRADUATES IN LAST OF COMMENCEMENT

Milton, June 18.—The exercises yesterday closed a very successful commencement week at Milton college. The outstanding feature of the day was the announcement by President Deland that the number of students for next year was about double the number of the year last year. More students than usual from Wisconsin high schools had signified their intention of entering the freshman class. Another outstanding feature of the day was the launching of the movement by the graduates and upper classes to add $100,000 to the endowment of the college. The attendance through the week has been extraordinarily large, and the air has been full of enthusiasm. The speaker of the morning was Dr. William S. Sadler, widely known as an author and a Chautauqua speaker. His subject was "The Elements of True Greatness," and he presented it in such a manner as to leave lasting impressions upon the lives of those present.

After the Alumni luncheon served by the Women's Village Improvement club, the walls of the auditorium gymnasium resounded to the strains of song for over two hours, as old students, teachers and friends of the college entered into the spirit of the occasion. Instead of the usual class memorial to the college, Loyd F. Hurley pledged the classes of '15, '16 and '17 to the task of raising the college endowment to $250,000. A college endowment association was announced, of which the members of these three classes are charter members. Other persons may become members by paying two dollars or securing five dollars as an endowment fund. This association will cooperate with other existing organizations toward the raising of this fund.

President Deland, in his annual statement, brought out the fact that the college has progressed rapidly in the last year, and he looked forward months. He spoke of the activities and the new library system, the latter enabling the students to have use of the library two nights out of the week. He also touched upon the subject of a greater endowment, and the idea was discussed by the students later. In his farewell address to the graduating class, the president gave some very fitting and sound advice.

The commencement program took place at ten o'clock Thursday morning and was started by a selection by the Milton Firemen's Band. A hymn was then sung and the invocation was given. The address of the day was then delivered by William Sadler, M. D., a violin orchestra selection, and the annual statement of the president. The Treble Clef and the Glee club gave a selection, after which the degrees were conferred and the farewell words and benediction were said. Seniors received Bachelor of Arts degrees. W. D. Burdick, Loyd Hurley, Mabel Lewis, Harrison Pierce, Lester Polan, Victor Randolph and Eleanor Wilbur. Those receiving Master of Arts degrees were: The Reverend George Robert Chambers, Ph. D., Philip Leslie, B. A., Wilbur Stewart, B. A., and the Reverend Dr. James William Thistle of London, England, was given a Master of Arts degree, honoris causa.

The Alumni luncheon was served in the gymnasium after the commencement exercises, and two hundred were seated. After a most delightful spread the regular program of toasts and business was carried out. President W. P. Clark, '61, of Milton, gave an address. After the business a five minute talk was given by each of the following: Rev. J. N. A. Anderson, '92, Washington, D. C.; Dr. Lena Sadler, Chicago; Prof. G. H. Crandall, '14, Neillsville; Prof. F. S. ## Do Your Children Brush Their Teeth Night and Morning?

If not, you are neglecting them and your duty and preparing sorrow for them. Teach your children about health.

A clean tooth does not decay. If you teach your children from the beginning to brush their teeth every morning and every night you will save them trouble and suffering and increase their efficiency throughout their whole lives.

Bad teeth cause sickness, chronic dyspepsia. They lead to other diseases.

They cause suffering, they are unsightly. They interfere with a girl's chances of marrying well.

Forty-Three Saloon Applications Filed

TWO MAKE APPLICATION FOR SALOON LICENSE NOW HELD BY FRED BERGDOLL.

TWO OTHERS EXPECTED

City Commission to Consider Granting of Licenses on the Twenty-ninth or Thirtieth of This Month.

Applications for saloon licenses to the number of forty-three have been filed at the office of City Clerk J. P. Hammarlund, to be published and then submitted to the city council for action. Three applications for brewery licenses by outside liquor agents have been filed, which are under the same rules as those for the retail liquor dealers. Under the zone resolution, no more than forty-two saloon licenses will be granted by the city commission and two of the dealers who now hold licenses have not made application, as yet. No application has been made for locations outside of the prescribed zone.

Two papers have been received for the saloon now held by Fred Bergdoll at 45 North Franklin street. Bergdoll filed his application and Fred Risch also filed one for the same place. It is rumored that Bergdoll will experience trouble in obtaining the license from the council. The council has refused to grant Kelly a license because of the zone resolution. The applications were accompanied by the bonds, one thousand for the state, and five hundred for the city, signed. These are subject to the approval of the council. All applications will be published three times, with fifteen days previous to the granting of the licenses by the council. As the saloon has to be closed to the public, the council will have to consider these two before one at a later meeting, as it is understood by the city officials, applications are to be filed within a few days.

The city commission will act upon the applications on June 29th or 30th. Those who have made application are as follows: Paul Behr, 109 N. First; Harry Bishop, 220 West Milwaukee; E. J. Borge, 15 N. River; Sam P. Brown, 51 S. River; Charles Buggs, 24 N. Main; Herman Buggs, 24 N. Main; Harry Borge, 405 W. Milwaukee; E. B. Connors, 208 W. Milwaukee; Isaac P. Connors and Son, 214 W. Milwaukee; Simon H. Connors, 16 N. Main; William Connors, 102 N. First; John Planney, 28 W. Milwaukee; F. W. Gentile, 123 E. Milwaukee; J. E. Gokey, 15 N. Academy; Oliver Grant, 102 Academy; A. K. Grant, 102 Academy; John Heimer, 11 North Main; Carl Heise, 50 S. Franklin; Gus J. Hill, 105 E. Milwaukee; W. Heller, 421 Milwaukee; John Heimer, 110 W. Milwaukee; John Kane, 110 W. Milwaukee; W. E. River; George B. Rudersdorf and C. B. Cushman, 205 W. Milwaukee; E. F. Siegel, 10 E. River; T. F. Siegel and E. F. Siegel, 14 E. Milwaukee; Harry Van Gilder, 14 N. Main; Bert Van Houten and T. H. Van Houten, 23 N. Academy; T. S. Welch, 16 N. Main; Fred Bergdoll, 15 N. Franklin; Fred Risch, 45 N. Franklin; and J. J. Kelly, 15 N. Academy.

The brewery license applications were made by the John Heimer, Carl Heimer and Carl Heimer, through their local agents. No license is required in this city of local brewers and the three companies do not make application. The local concerns have been taken up in numerous cities and inquiries were made by the Janesville officials on the subject. The three companies, who are the only ones who have applied, received four cities charged the brewers the same license fees as saloons. The cities charging license were Fond du Lac, Racine, Green Bay, Beloit, Ashland, La Crosse, Superior, Oshkosh, Madison, Green Bay, Appleton and Manitowish.

CONVENT PUPILS IN CLOSING PROGRAMS

Big Week of Activity and Graduation Exercises is Held at St. Patrick's school.

The past week was one of unusual interest and activity to the pupils of St. Patrick's school. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the pupils were busily and earnestly engaged in writing tests to prove themselves capable of entering the higher grades.

On Thursday afternoon, while the second, third, fourth and fifth grades were enjoying themselves, the sixth grade pupils gave a very interesting entertainment consisting of several well rendered numbers. The manner in which the pupils performed their parts merited their great credit, and provoked much praise from the auditors.

At the close of the entertainment, nine pupils from the seventh and two from the sixth grade received diplomas for penmanship. Miss Eugene Kelly made the presentation in his pleasing way by a few well chosen words, congratulating them heartily in behalf of their teachers and friends on their success.

The O. H. treated the Irish history classes to ice cream, which was partaken of on the convent lawn where the children repaired for games and amusement.

LIGHTING BOOSTERS HAVE BIG PETITION

HUNDREDS EAGER TO SIGN PAPERS FOR CITY-WIDE BETTER STREET LIGHTING SYSTEM AT ONCE.

WORK ONE AFTERNOON

Committee of Fifteen in Half Day Yesterday Find No Trouble in Securing Big List of Names.

Fifteen members of the Janesville Commercial club, the city lighting plan booster committee, in a busy afternoon yesterday found practically everybody in the downtown and factory sections of the city ready to pull "all-together" to place the Bower City of the future with the better lighted cities of the state.

Working in pairs, under the direction of Chairman Edward Amerpohl, the committee opened their campaign early in the afternoon. They visited the offices, stores and nearly all the factories. The downtown street corners were patrolled also and every passerby was asked to sign his name, pledging his support to the new illuminating plan. The gigantic petition will be presented later to Mayor Fathers and other members of the city commission.

Records of the exact number of names have not been compiled, but it was stated this morning that an approximate hundred names had been secured on each of the fifteen petitions.

The committee had no trouble whatever in securing signers. Everybody approached was in accord with the plan, and many of the signers better lights. The fact that the club decided to extend their efforts to better the night conditions in the residential districts as well as down town proved a drawing card, which the booster idea was proposed it was planned that only the business district should be included in the new plan. This innovation led to the asking of the question, "If we are going to properly light our business district why not, while we are at it, undertake to light the entire city properly?" Members of the committee, who are in the city, the advisability of the proposition and at once turned their efforts to the city as a whole rather than to any one particular section.

Then the cause was formulated and the committee got real busy yesterday afternoon.

"The idea is great," a prominent merchant said when approached for his signature, "and while it is a little has been given to the dark corners of our city with their lack of efficient lighting I have had some personal experience myself that are similar to those presented here. The plan in the Gazette, Janesville needs and needs bad, and at once, a better system of street lighting. While we have been backward very much, our method of illumination. I went through the northern part of the state recently on a business trip and was amazed to find that the systems of many cities and small towns, particularly the latter, for they seemed to have the spirit of advancement far more than we have here. ## REAL MOVIE THRILL ENACTED IN COURT

Husband and Wife in Reconciliation Scene Following Former's Arraignment on Desertion Charge.

When George Keeler, a young man about 24 years of age, was arraigned in the municipal court this morning on the charges of wife desertion and neglect, there was a real "movie scene" enacted, which was unusual, with the wife "forgiving and forgetting" and the alleged negligent husband petitioning for one more chance, which was given him.

A warrant was sworn out charging desertion by the wife, Irene Keeler, and the police took the man into custody today where he was held in the rooming house for her wine and baby, which had viewed the scene with mild interest. Keeler did not wish to plead guilty and his case was set for trial at 2 p. m. in order to allow him to make good his promise not to cause further complaint. Husband and wife, with baby and mother, departed from the court in a happy group and from that time on, all differences had been adjusted.

HENRY B. NEEDHAM WAS A CLASSMATE OF LOCAL ATTORNEY

War Correspondent Killed in Aeroplane Accident in France Attended Academy With M. O. Mount.

Henry Beech Needham, American killed in an aeroplane accident in France this week, attended Beloit College academy, 1887 to 1888, and was a classmate of M. O. Mount of this city. Harry Rieger, now a professor in Columbia University, and J. Stevens, son of Major Stevens, both of Janesville, were also in the same class. Mr. Mount stated today that he remembered Needham well in college.

A war correspondent who visited the scene of the accident soon after it occurred, gives the following account:

"I have just seen the spot where occurred the terrible air tragedy resulting in the deaths of Lieutenant Warfield and Henry B. Needham, the American writer. I saw the wreckage of the plane lying in the thick growth of barley field lay the remains of England's greatest air hero of the war. Accompanying me was one of the two men who picked up the bodies immediately after the accident.

"Forty yards from this spot," my companion said, "lay the shattered wreckage. Midway we found Needham, whose one leg had been crushed and his head was crushed. As we carried him he gave a gasp and died."

Aeroplane Was New.

"I found the wrecked machine lying upside down with the propeller broken. The speedometer and other instruments, however, remained intact. It was a Henry Farmas biplane, just delivered to the British air service, in which Warfield planned to fly to Dunkirk tomorrow."

"Farnas' manager gave me this explanation of how he assumed the accident had occurred:

"The engine having missed fire," he said, "Warfield, after steeping down, was coming down, but he took the dive too abruptly. His height then was about 500 feet and with the heavy 150-horsepower engine, his machine lost its equilibrium and tumbled over."

"Had it been 2,000 feet up, the pilot could have righted it again."

First Flight Uneventful.

"Lieutenant Fitzgibbon, a British naval officer, accompanied Warfield on his first flight, which lasted only five minutes. The tragedy came within two minutes of the beginning of the second trip."

"It is reported that Fitzgibbon's wife should accompany Warfield on his second flight, but at the last minute Needham took her place."

"Farnas' manager, New York advertising man and a friend of Needham told me of how the latter, who had been in Europe for some time writing magazine articles, came to make the trip."

"With letters of introduction from the American embassy and friends, Needham went to Beloit and made the flight arrangement with the British authorities. His object being to write an article on Warfield."

"We have heard it said that this was a joy ride. Emphatically deny the allegation. Needham was fulfilling his duty as an enterprising newspaper writer after making formal arrangements."

THE THREE OF US

SCORES BIG HIT

ed Actress Well Received at Myers Theatre.

The "Three of Us" in which Mable Taliaferro was starred in film at Myers Theatre yesterday has as one of its sub-themes an intensely human story of a sister's devotion to a brother who might be considered more or less of a rogue. How the sister, Rhy MacCheaney, ultimately redeems her brother Clem, and incidentally wins independence and a fortune for brother, her fiancé and herself was well acted before the camera. The scenic effects were exceptionally beautiful and the photography was unusually clear and distinct.

Robert Warwick in "The Man Who Found Himself."

On Tuesday the Apollo presents Robert Warwick in the 5-part photoplay "The Man Who Found Himself," based upon George Broadhurst's successful drama "The Mills of the Gods" also called, at the time of its production, a few years ago, "The Coward."

The story is as follows: James Clarke, young cashier, robs his employers in order to provide medical attention for his sick sister. She dies and a fellow employee of Clarke's discovers his theft and blackmails him. Both are eventually found out, prosecuted and sent to gaol.

By a series of chances, James Clarke escapes from gaol, gets a job, is earning an honest living and has won the love of a girl whose life he saved.

Payton, his fellow thief, after serving his full term, discovers Clarke and, once more, blackmails him, attacking the happiness of his fiancée and her brother and taunting Clarke with cowardice.

From this terrible situation Clarke escapes by voluntarily returning to gaol to serve the remainder of his sentence.

He has "found" himself. He knows that when he finally leaves the gaol, Catherine, who has promised to be his wife, will be waiting to help him start life afresh.

David Belasco's Famous Success.

"May Blossom" on the Screen.

The famous Players Film company's sympathetic and realistic photo-adaptation of David Belasco's great American drama, "May Blossom," which will be presented at the Apollo on Wednesday, on the Paramount program, will undoubtedly revive the interest so universally created by the original stage production of this famous play.

Its tender romance, its frank presentation of problems familiar in our domestic life, and its thrilling military aspects of the great struggle of a half a century ago, combine to make this subject one of the most typical and appealing American plays ever produced in this photoplay the pictorial and scenic possibilities of this big drama are remarkably enhanced, and the interest of the stirring plot is greatly strengthened by the more elaborate presentation made possible on the screen.

"May Blossom" impressed the nation with its power and charm. The photoplay will make this great Basco success completely unforgettable. The love of two men for a southern girl, the unexpected circumstances that take away her favored suitor, who is suspected of being a spy, the perils of him who remains, who marries her through a lie, and his subsequent redemption form the fabric of the tense romance.

The play is effectively enacted by a sterling Famous Players cast, including Gertrude Robinson, Russell Bassett, Marshall Nellan, Donald Crisp and Gertrude Norman.

AT THE APOLLO.

Victor Moore in "Snoobs" on Monday.

Victor Moore, who is one of the most distinguished comedy stars in America, and whose name is most intimately associated with the most important George M. Cohan productions, makes his photodramatic debut at the Apollo on Monday in "Snoobs," which also has the distinction of having been offered at the Strand Theatre in New York for the first anniversary week of that world-renowned institution.

The play, in which the photo-drama is founded is commonly regarded as the most laughable satire ever produced on Broadway, where it ran for an entire season, and did much to make the fame of its author, George Bronson Howard.

In "Snoobs" Victor Moore has the convulsively laughable role of a milkman of the most ordinary variety who suddenly inherits the title and vast wealth of an English Duke. This milkman, though his instincts are perfectly good, has something of a natural taste for the "high spots" of life and immediately upon getting an advance installment of his inheritance, proceeds to purchase most extreme garments, the longest cigars and all the other equipment necessary in his eyes for a noble millionaire.

Before long, however, the Duke discovers that the very people who pretend to be most impressed by him are really ridiculing him behind his back, and endeavors to announce both title and money. However, a genuine, whole-hearted girl comes to his rescue. This brings the romantic element into the story as the solution of all the Duke's difficulties.

She forced a laugh to her lips, a gay, tender laugh even as her fingers twined fiercely about his own.

"But, Jim, I don't want any children just now. I want to enjoy myself, to see something of happiness. Sometimes," she tempered the blow, "sometimes I think, Jim, that I'm little more than a child myself. I've been caged and starved so long that I hardly seem grown up yet. Don't you understand, Jim?"

She fought against showing her hurt as he sharply drew away his cheek from her own, then pressed it close once more.

"Wait till Billie puts those sticky arms about your neck, Rita. Then—then you'll know," he called back.

There was a look of triumph upon Mrs. Sharpe's vinegary face as, announcing herself into the Reverend Deane's study with a triumphant rustle of the newspaper in her hand, she stepped beside him. Slowly he lifted his leaden eyes from the sermon upon which he had been working, shrinking away a bit before that expression he had come to know so well.

He was frightened of this woman, this woman who seemed to read his thoughts, his heartaches; who took such delight in probing at his wounds.

"Yes, Mrs. Sharpe?" he queried wearily, as she thrust the newspaper into his hands with a waspish sweep, waiting beside him while his eyes readily found the leader that signalled another escapade of Mrs. James White, the daughter that had been his.

Had been? As his eyes caught the headline again, he suddenly found himself unable to read further for the mist of tears that sprang to his eyes. She was his daughter still!

Try though he might he had failed to shut her out of his life.

His eyes sought the headline again, sought and read it through, though it was hours before the meaning of the words fully penetrated to his brain.

Hours he sat in his chair, motionless as one dead, leaden of soul, broken of heart.

YOUNG HOSTESS PLANS BIG DINNER SURPRISE.

Rumored Mrs. James White Will Appear Tonight as Dancing Girl to Entertain Guests.

The rustle of the newspaper falling to the floor brought him to his feet, his eyes blazing with sudden resolution. He darted from the room, snatching his hat automatically from the rack, and rushed out upon the street.

A fierce fanaticism tugged at him, driving him faster, ever faster. His daughter must be saved, must be taken away from the depths into which she had been dragged. He rushed up the driveway, the gravel crunching under his feet fiercely. The butler at the door would have halted him but he brushed the startled servant aside.

"You have made me wish there hadn't been any money," she lamented, with a sorrowful little catch in her voice that stabbed him like a knife. "I haven't so many friends that I can afford to lose them recklessly, Mr. Griswold."

"Damn the money!" he exploded; and the malediction came out of a full heart.

Her fingers had found the ball-push and were pressing it. When the custodian opened the door, Miss Grierson was her poised self again.

"Number three-fifty-five-A is Mr. Kenneth Griswold's box, now," she announced briefly. "Please register it in his name, and then help him to put it away and lock it up."

Griswold went through the motions with the key-bearing young woman half-absently. Man-like, he was ready to be forgiven and comforted; and there was at least oblivion in her charming little shudder as the custodian shut the bolts of the gate to let them out.

"Br-r-r!" she shivered. "I can never stand here and look at the free people out there without fancying myself in a prison. It must be a dreadful thing to be shut away behind bolts and bars, forgotten by everybody, and yet yourself unable to forget. Do you ever have such foolish thoughts, Mr. Griswold?"

For one poignant second fear leaped alive again and he called himself no better than a lost man. But the eyes that were lifted to his were the eyes of a questioning child, so guiltlessly innocent that he immediately suffered another relapse into the pit of self-despising.

"You have made me your prisoner, Miss Grierson," he said, speaking to his own thought rather than to her question. And when they reached the sidewalk and the trap, "May I bid you good-by here and go to my own place?"

"Of course not!" she protested. "Mr. Raymer is coming to dinner tonight and he will drive you over to Mrs. Holcomb's afterward, if you really think you must go."

And for the first time in their comings and goings she let him lift her to the high driving-seat.

CHAPTER XVI.

Converging Roads.

Matthew Broffin had been two weeks and half of a third an unobtrusive spy upon the collective activities of the Wahaskan social group which included the Farnhams before he decided that nothing could be gained by further delay.

Having his own private superstition about Friday, Broffin chose a Wednesday afternoon for his call at the house on the lake front. It was a resplendent day of the early summer, which, in the Minnesota latitudes, springs, Minervallike, full grown from the nodding head of the wintry Jove of the North. In the doctor's front yard the grass was vividly green, gladioli and jonquils bordered the path with a bravery of color, and the buds of the clambering rose on the porch trellis were swelling to burst their calyxes.

Broffin turned in from the sidewalk and closed the gate noiselessly behind him. While he had been three doors away in the lake-fronting street, a small pocket binocular had assured him that the young woman he was going to call upon was sitting in a porch rocker behind the clambering rose, reading a book.

She had risen to meet him by the time he had mounted the steps, and he knew that her first glance was appreciative. He had confidently counted upon being mistaken for a strange patient in search of the doctor, and he was not disappointed.

"You are looking for Doctor Farnham?" she began. "He is at his office—201 Main street."

Broffin was digging in his pocket for a card.

"I know well enough where your father's office is, but you are the one I wanted to see," he said; and he gave her the round-cornered card with his blazonment of his name and employment.

He was watching her narrowly when she read the name and its underline, and the quick indrawing of the breath and the little shudder that went with it were not thrown away upon him.

But the other signs, the pressing of the even teeth upon the lower lip and the coming and going of three straight lines between the half-closed eyes were not so favorable.

"Will you come into the house, Mr. Broffin?" she had to look at the card again to get the name—"Mr. Broffin?" she asked.

"Thank you, miss; it's plenty good enough out here for me if it is for you," he returned, beginning to fear that the common civilities were giving her time to get behind her defenses.

"I guess we can take it for granted that you know what I want, Miss Farnham," he began abruptly, when he had shifted his chair to face her rocker. "Something like three months ago, or thereabouts, you went into a bank in New Orleans to get a draft cashed. While you were at the paying tellers' window a robbery was committed, and you saw it done and saw the man that did it. I've come to get you to tell me the man's name."

"I have told it once, in a letter to Mr. Galbraith."

Broffin nodded. "Yes; in a letter that you didn't sign. I've come all the way from New Orleans to get you to tell me his real name, Miss Farnham."

"Why do you think I can tell you?" was the undisturbed query.

"A lot of little things," said the detective, who was slowly coming to his own in the matter of self-assurance. "In the first place, he spoke to you in the bank, and you answered him, isn't that so?"

She nodded again. "You know so much, it is surprising that you don't know it all, Mr. Broffin," she commented, with gentle sarcasm.

"The one thing I don't know is the thing you're going to tell me—his real name," he insisted. "That's what I've come here for."

In spite of her inexperience, which, in Mr. Broffin's field, was no less than total, Charlotte Farnham had imagination, and with it a womanly zest for the matching of wits with a man whose chief occupation was the measuring of his own wit against the subtle cleverness of criminals. Therefore she accepted the challenge.

"I did my whole duty at the time, Mr. Broffin," she demurred, with a touch of coldness in her voice. "If you were careless enough to let him escape you at St. Louis, you shouldn't come to me. I might say very justly that it was never any affair of mine."

Matthew Broffin's gifts were subtle only in his dealings with other men; but he was shrewd enough to know that his last and best chance with a woman lay in an appeal to her fears.

"I Am an Officer of the Law," he bluffed me, don't you?—what? Let me tell you: some fine day this duck whose name isn't Gavitt will turn up here—to see you; then I'll nab him. If you find out where he is, and write to him not to come, it'll be all the same; he'll come anyway, and when he does come, I'll get him!"

When Miss Farnham had gone in and there was nothing left for him to do but to compass his own disappearance, Broffin went away, telling himself with many blandishments that for once in his professional career he had made an ass of himself. The doctor's daughter knew the man; she had known him before the robbery; she was willing to be his accomplice to the extent of her ability. There was only one explanation of this attitude. In Broffin's wording of it, Miss Farnham was "gone on him," if not openly, at least to such an extent as to make her anxious to shield him.

That being the case, Broffin set it down as a fact as good as accomplished that the man would sooner or later come to Wahaska. The detective's knowledge of masculine human nature was as profoundly acute as the requirements of his calling demanded. With a woman like Miss Farnham for the lure, he could be morally certain that his man would some time fling caution, or even a written prohibition, to the winds, and walk into the trap.

This misfire of Broffin's happened upon a Wednesday, which, in its calendar placing, chanced to be three weeks to a day after Griswold had left

"Damn the Money!" He Exploded.

"I don't know what made you write this letter, in the first place," he said, taking the well-thumbed paper from his coat pocket; "but I know well enough now why you didn't sign it, and why you didn't put the man's real name in it. You—you and him—fixed it up between you so that you could say to yourself afterwards what you've just said to me—that you'd done your duty. But you haven't finished doing your duty yet. The law says—"

"I know very well that the law says," was her baffling rejoinder; "I have taken the trouble to find out since I came home. I am not hiding your criminal."

Broffin was trying to gain a little ease by tilting his chair. But the house wall was too close behind him.

"People will say that you are helping to hide him as long as you won't tell his real name—what?" he grated.

"You still think I could tell you that, if I choose?" she said, willfully misleading him; or at least allowing him to mislead himself.

"I don't think anything about it—I know! You'd met him somewhere before that day in the bank—before you knew he was going to turn gentleman holdup. That's why you don't want to give up his real name."

She had risen, and in self-defense Broffin had to grope on the floor for his hat and stand up too.

"Wait a minute! I'm an officer of the law, and I could arrest you and take you to New Orleans on what evidence I've got. How about that?"

There was good fighting blood on the Farnham side, notwithstanding the kindly Doctor Bertie's peaceful vocation, and the calm gray eyes that met Broffin's were militantly angry when the retort came.

"If I had a brother, Mr. Broffin, he would be able to answer you better than I can!" she flamed out. "Let me pass, please!"

It was not often that Broffin lost his head or his temper, but both were gone when he struck back.

"That'll be all right, too!" he broke out harshly, blocking the way to force her to listen to him. "You think you've bluffed me, don't you?—what? Let me tell you: some fine day this duck whose name isn't Gavitt will turn up here—to see you; then I'll nab him. If you find out where he is, and write to him not to come, it'll be all the same; he'll come anyway, and when he does come, I'll get him!"

When Miss Farnham had gone in and there was nothing left for him to do but to compass his own disappearance, Broffin went away, telling himself with many blandishments that for once in his professional career he had made an ass of himself. The doctor's daughter knew the man; she had known him before the robbery; she was willing to be his accomplice to the extent of her ability. There was only one explanation of this attitude. In Broffin's wording of it, Miss Farnham was "gone on him," if not openly, at least to such an extent as to make her anxious to shield him.

That being the case, Broffin set it down as a fact as good as accomplished that the man would sooner or later come to Wahaska. The detective's knowledge of masculine human nature was as profoundly acute as the requirements of his calling demanded. With a woman like Miss Farnham for the lure, he could be morally certain that his man would some time fling caution, or even a written prohibition, to the winds, and walk into the trap.

This misfire of Broffin's happened upon a Wednesday, which, in its calendar placing, chanced to be three weeks to a day after Griswold had left

"Damn the Money!" He Exploded.

"I don't know what made you write this letter, in the first place," he said, taking the well-thumbed paper from his coat pocket; "but I know well enough now why you didn't sign it, and why you didn't put the man's real name in it. You—you and him—fixed it up between you so that you could say to yourself afterwards what you've just said to me—that you'd done your duty. But you haven't finished doing your duty yet. The law says—"

"I know very well that the law says," was her baffling rejoinder; "I have taken the trouble to find out since I came home. I am not hiding your criminal."

Broffin was trying to gain a little ease by tilting his chair. But the house wall was too close behind him.

"People will say that you are helping to hide him as long as you won't tell his real name—what?" he grated.

"You still think I could tell you that, if I choose?" she said, willfully

Meredith to settle himself studiously in two quiet upper rooms in the Widow Holcomb's house in upper Shawnee street.

That it was also a day of other coincidences will appear in the casting up of the items on the page of events.

For one thing, it marked the formal opening of the De Soto Inn for the summer season. For another, the special train from the far South arriving at noon and bearing the first detachment of the inn's guests, had for one of its Pullman passengers an elderly gentleman with a strongly marked Scottish face; a gentleman with the bushy white eyebrows of age, the long upper lip of caution, the drooping eyelid of irascibility, and the bearing of a man of routine; in other words, Mr. Andrew Galbraith, faring northward on his customary summer vacation, which—the fates intervening—he had this time determined to spend at the Wahaskan resort.

For a third item, it was at three o'clock of this same Wednesday that Raymer came out of Jasper Grierson's bank with his head down and a cloud on his brow; the cloud dating back to an interview just closed, a short and rather brittle conference with the bank's president held in Jasper Grierson's private room, with the president sitting at ease in his huge armchair and his visitor standing, quite destitute of ease, at the desk-end.

Raymer's horse was only a short half-square away, hitched in front of the Wahaskan house, and he went to get it. But at the instant of unhitching, Miss Grierson's trap was driven up and the untying of knots paused while he stepped from the curb to stand at the wheel of the modish equipage.

"You are getting to be as bad as all the others," was the greeting he got from the high driving seat. "You haven't been at Meredith for an age—only once since the night you took Mr. Griswold away from us. By the way, what has become of Mr. Griswold? He doesn't show himself in public much oftener than you do."

"I think he has been getting to work on his writing," said Raymer, good-naturedly apologizing for his friend. "He'll come down out of the clouds after a little. I understand he dines at Doctor Bertie's tonight."

The young iron founder was looking up into the eyes of beguiling when he said this, and, being a mere man, he wondered what made them flash and then grow suddenly fathomless and brooding.

"When you see him, tell him that we are still on earth over at Meredith," said the magnate's daughter pertly; and a moment later, as Raymer was turning out of Main street into Shawnee, he narrowly missed running over a heavy-set man with a dark face and drooping mustaches; a pedestrian whose preoccupation seemed so great as to make him quite oblivious to street crossings and passing vehicles until Raymer pulled his horse back into the shafts and shouted.

Dinner Stories

The Count—You really think things will be better than ever after the war?

The Duke—My dear sir, of course they will. Think of the enormous demand for titles that must be accumulating among the American heiresses, and think what a small supply of us there will be left.

"We've won that suit of Thompson's against the railroad company," said the junior partner. "What shall we charge him?"

"Let me see," said the senior partner. "What was the amount of the damages?"

"Twenty thousand dollars."

"Make his bill out for nineteen thousand five hundred. He's entitled to something for giving us the case."

Two countrymen were among the recruits mustered on the drill ground and one of them, remarkably raw, asked his companion what to do when he got the order "Halt." "Well," replied the fatter of the two, "the ground to the side of the fut that's in the air, and thin remain quite motionless!"

"She threatened to throw hot water in my face," said a school attendance officer, referring to a woman who had been summoned in respect to the truancy of her child.

"You must not throw hot water," the judge told the defendant. "You can heap coal of fire on his head, if you like."

Something of a "Snap." Joseph had just started to kindergarten and therefore was required to go only half a day. The little boy next door saw him home one afternoon and said: "Don't you go to school any more, Joe?" "Oh, yes," Joseph replied, "but I only have to go in the morning. Ain't I got it simple?"

Approaching a Reform.

"Has Crimmon Gulch adopted prohibition?" "No," replied Broncho Bob. "But it's on the way. So's to bring it around gradual, the judge has made a rule that any man who draws a gun on another will have to quit drinking. You'll be surprised to see how nice and orderly the old place is gettin' to be."

DANGER

BY SIR ARTHUR CONAN
DOYLE

Copyright, 1914, by P. F. Collier
and Son.

"Several of the enemy's submarines are at sea and have inflicted some appreciable damage upon our merchant ships. The danger spots upon Monday and the greater part of Tuesday appeared to have been the mouth of the Thames and the western entrance to the Solent. On Monday between the Nore and Margate there were sunk three large steamers, the Adela, Monte, Caesar, King of the East and Pathfinder were destroyed between the Portland and Boulogne. The latter three were actually lying in French waters, and the most energetic representations have been made by the government of the republic. On the same day the Queen of Sheba, Orontes, Diana and Atalanta were destroyed near the Needles. Wireless messages have stopped all incoming cargo ships from coming up channel, but unfortunately there is evidence that at least two of the enemy's submarines are in the west. Four cattle ships from Dublin to Liverpool were sunk yesterday evening, while three Bristol bound steamers, the Hilda, Mercury and Maria Teresa, were blown up in the neighborhood of Lundy Island. Commerce has so far as possible been diverted into safer channels, but in the meantime, however vexatious these incidents may be and however grievous the loss both to the owners and to Lloyd's, we may console ourselves by the reflection that, channel. That sentence about diverting commerce to safer routes could only mean that the ships would go round the north of Ireland and unload at Glasgow. Oh, for two more ships to stop that entrance! Heavens, what would England have done against a foe with thirty or forty submarines since we only needed six instead of four to complete her destruction!

After much talk we decided that the best plan would be that I should dispatch a cipher telegram next morning from a French port to tell them to send the four second rate boats to cruise off the north of Ireland and west of Scotland. Then when I had done this I should move down channel with Stephan and operate at the mouth, while the other two boats could work in the Irish sea. Having made these plans, I set off across the channel in the early morning, reaching the small village of Etretat, in Brittany. There I got off my telegram and then laid my course for Falmouth, passing under the keels of two British cruisers which were searching for us.

Halfway down channel we had trouble with a short circuit in our electric engines and were compelled to run on the surface for several hours while we replaced one of the cam shafts and renewed some washers. It was a ticklish time, for had a torpedo boat come upon us we could not have dived. The perfect submarine of the future will surely have some alternative engines for such an emergency. However, by the skill of Engineer Morro we got things going once more. All the time we lay there I saw a hydroplane floating between us and the British coast. I can understand how a mouse feels when it is in a tuft of grass and sees a hawk high up in the heavens. However, all went well. The mouse became a water rat; it wagged its tail in derision at the poor blind old hawk, and it dived down into a nice, safe, green, quiet world, where there was nothing to injure it.

It was on Wednesday night that the lota crossed to Etretat. It was Friday afternoon before we had reached our new cruising ground. Only one large steamer did I see upon my way. The

BATTLESHIP ARIZONA IS SAFELY LAUNCHED

ANOTHER FIFTEEN MILLION DOLLAR SEA FORTRESS ADDED TO THE AMERICAN NAVY.

IMMENSE ARMAMENT

In flight. There are few ships in any navy fit to cope with the Arizona, ship to ship.

Range of Guns.
The range of the Arizona's guns is from 12 to 13 miles as they will be set. Twelve big rifles can be fired over the horizon, and observers can see in brightest weather. As previous ships carrying the 14-inch guns, the Arizona's main battery will have a maximum elevation of nearly twenty degrees. It would be possible, it is said, to almost double that elevation and add miles to the range of the guns, but already they can shoot and hit further it is probable they would ever be called upon to do.

The Arizona will carry the three gun turrets which have been developed by American naval constructors, her two big rifles being housed in four turrets, two forward and two after. In addition she will have a secondary battery of twenty-two 5-inch, long range rifles for defense against submarines, torpedo boats and smaller craft. The big guns can be fired over either broadside and around the entire circle with the exception of an arc of less than thirty degrees directly forward for the after turrets and directly astern for the forward turrets. Four of the secondary battery guns, two on each side, are so placed that they can fire three degrees across the ship's bows, taking the place of bow chasers of the old wooden ship days.

Has Small Crew.
Compared to the Arizona the old battleships of the Oregon class are almost like toys. The new ship could engage a fleet of three of them at the same time, turning upon each as many runs as it could bring to bear and her guns would be bigger and of longer range. In addition she could steam away from them or overtake them at pleasure, developing 21 knots against their 16 or 17. The remarkable thing about the great increase in size and gun power, however, is that each of the smaller ships would need as many or more men than the Arizona which will carry a complement of 915 in her crew.

The new Arizona's cost as she took the water today cost more than any other ship in the navy. That was for hull and machinery alone. The guns and armor will cost as much more, and other equipment necessary to fit her for duty will add another million to her total cost. She is longer and wider than any but the newest transatlantic liners. If it is desired to ship to be built in a government yard the locks and bends in the channel will be taxed almost to the limit to give her passage way.

The Arizona is the fourth battleship to be built in a government yard and her place on the ways will be taken at once by the California, a larger and faster but similarly armed ship.

AVIATOR'S AUDACITY AND SKILL RESULTS IN MILITARY MEDAL

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Paris, June 19.—Eduard Bunau-Varilla, the son of Philippe Bunau-Varilla, has been cited in the orders of the day for his daring work as an aviator and awarded the military medal. He distinguished himself especially in the Champagne country by his audacity and skill under difficult circumstances. Atmospheric difficulties exposed him repeatedly to great danger and his machine was struck many times by bullets and fragments of shell.

Monsieur Bunau-Varilla, the father, is a major in the engineers attached to the staff of an army corps on the fighting line.

IRON PRICES RISE THROUGHOUT GERMANY DUE TO BIG DEMAND

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Copenhagen, June 19.—Iron prices in Germany continue to rise. The price of steel is now more than $50 a ton, the minimum price of bar iron is $366, and iron ore is quoted at $11. Pig iron is $26, but scrap iron has fallen in price owing to the heavy stocks seized in France, Belgium and Russia.

IMMENSE TANNERY BURNED TO GROUND BY FRENCH AIRMEN

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Bern, Switzerland, June 19.—The recent French air raid on Strasbourg resulted in the burning of one of the largest tanneries in Germany, an establishment which has been engaged exclusively on army work since the commencement of the war. The loss is over a million dollars.

NOT FOR MEN ONLY.
Foley Cathartic Tablets are not as insistently demanded by women as by men because this particular cathartic is not so well known among women. Women suffer as much as men from indigestion and constipation, and they also require this scientific remedy to keep the stomach sweet, the liver active and the bowels regular. Foley Cathartic Tablets are wholesome and thoroughly cleansing; do not gripe or cause nausea. Stout people say this is the one cathartic that takes away that over-full and clogged-up feeling. W. T. SUNDAY AT THE FAIR GROUNDS.

SIDE LIGHTS on THE CIRCUS BUSINESS

By D. W. WATT

Possibly but few people are aware that the oldest showman in the world lives in Rock county, and has made his permanent home here for more than fifty years.

This man is Colonel George Washington Hall, and his home is in Evansville. By appointment, I made the colonel a visit last Monday and when I arrived at the station the colonel was there with his horse and carriage to meet me. You only have to take a look at him to know he is well over the hill of life, for his snow white hair which rested gently on his shoulders told the story plainer than words of the many years he has lived. The horse he was driving, he told me, was known as "Old Calico," and that she was 22 years old. The colonel came from the famous ranch of Buffalo Bill at North Platte, Nebraska.

The colonel said he and "Old Calico" have been partners for years, and that he could leave her for hours on the street without trying, and he said that while she would be of little value to anyone else, money could not buy her from him.

We were soon on our road to his home, which is located just outside the city limits, south of the city. The house is of the bungalow style, contains five rooms and is modern in every way. There is something like two acres of land with large shade trees and is certainly one of the beautiful spots of the town. There Colonel Hall, or "Popcorn George," as he is familiarly known, and his extremely able wife, "Mother Louie," as she had been known in the circus business for many years, live alone with the exception of a few pets, such as a fox terrier dog, one of the largest great danes that I ever saw, and a parrot that insisted on talking most of the time.

Mrs. Hall showed me their curio room, which contained hundreds of curios which they have gathered in the last fifty years from all parts of the world. Colonel Hall not only hears the distinction of being the oldest living showman, but he has put in more years in the business than any man that ever lived, for there was twenty-five years of his life that his show never closed. Colonel Hall owns several acres of property in Evansville and lives on a farm near by, so that he is provided well for a rainy day. It is there in the modest bungalow where they have spent so many years of their lives that he and mother Louie expect to stay until the Announcer calls all over.

The showman in hard luck has been helped on his way to prosperity by "Popcorn George," and he has the reputation in his own town of being a worthy person to help the second time.

Col. George Hall has the reputation of accomplishing many difficult undertakings, among them chartering a sailing vessel, taking an entire show, elephants and camels and bringing them in the islands of the West Indies, something that no other showman attempted.

Colonel Hall was born in Lowell, Mass., on the fifth day of December, 1837. When he was seven years old he went with his parents to Manchester, New Hampshire. He did not take to books or school, and left home at the age of ten years and went to Lawrence, where he found employment as an errand boy with a man by the name of Adsett, at one dollar per week. He saw a man selling popcorn and this seemed to appeal to him.

About this time the city of Boston was celebrating its one hundredth anniversary. Horace Greeley was the sponsor of the day. George was there, and his original way of selling popcorn attracted Greeley's attention so much that upon reaching New York, Mr. Greeley gave him a write-up. Going into the business place, they did not seem inclined to buy, but they would pour out some popcorn on the counter, saying:

"I guess it is my treat," and walk out. The next time he came sales would be good.

Colonel Hall came to Wisconsin in 1860 and ran a sideshow with the Dick Sand's circus one season. Then on a season with Jerry Mable, one season with Van Ambler, and another with continued in this business until 1885. He then organized a show of his own, and took the show to the south, where he remained about twenty-five years. On the first day of January, 1885, he chartered a schooner, the "Emma Fox," carried his show to the West Indies and South America, showing at all the Windward Islands, the Bahamas, Trinidad, and then to the mainland and showed in many cities and towns in the Amazon region. In 1886 he also traveled through Mexico, showing at many places, including the City of Mexico, and coming out at El Paso. He was showing at Vera Cruz in 1898 when the Spanish war broke out.

Colonel Hall has seen many ups and downs, but has always been equal to all the emergencies. He was considered one of the leading side show operators of his day. George Delavan, the manager of the Great Eastern show, which was opened by Rob Miles, Andrew and Jacob Hall, and George Delavan, paid the colonel $250 per week one entire season, and he would make it satisfactory. That started them buying tickets. Soon one big fellow came out and said: "I am not satisfied with the show," and he would make it satisfactory. That started them buying tickets. Soon one big fellow came out and said: "I am not satisfied with the show," and he would make it satisfactory. That started them buying tickets.

At one time he was showing in a small town and was doing the talking at the door. The crowd was slow buying tickets. He made the announcement that if anyone would buy into the show and was not perfectly satisfied, he would make it satisfactory. That started them buying tickets. Soon one big fellow came out and said: "I am not satisfied with the show," and he would make it satisfactory. That started them buying tickets.

One of Colonel Hall's many big attractions in the business, was Captain Bates and wife, W. W. Cole's show paid this couple $1,000 per week. Captain Bates was eight feet tall and weighed 500 pounds. Mrs. Bates was eight feet and two inches tall and weighed 450 pounds. This was the tallest married couple ever on exhibition.

Colonel Hall had many experiences and achievements and they are so varied that space will not permit more.

He has educated his children in the show business. Mable is now with the Jones Bros. Show, working three horses. King, a high school dancing horse, does the turkey-trot and cost $1,500. Colonel, also a high school horse, does the cake-walk and cost $1,100. Both are Kentucky bred horses. Rob Roy, an Irish hunter, bred in Canada, cost $1,200.

There are now four generations in the Hall family and all are old enough to be in the show business. Colonel Hall has earned a good reputation as a pioneer showman. While he has not accumulated a great fortune, he has enough to make him comfortable in his old age. Too much credit cannot be given Mrs. Hall for her success. She thoroughly understands show business and took entire charge of the show many times during Mr. Hall's absence.

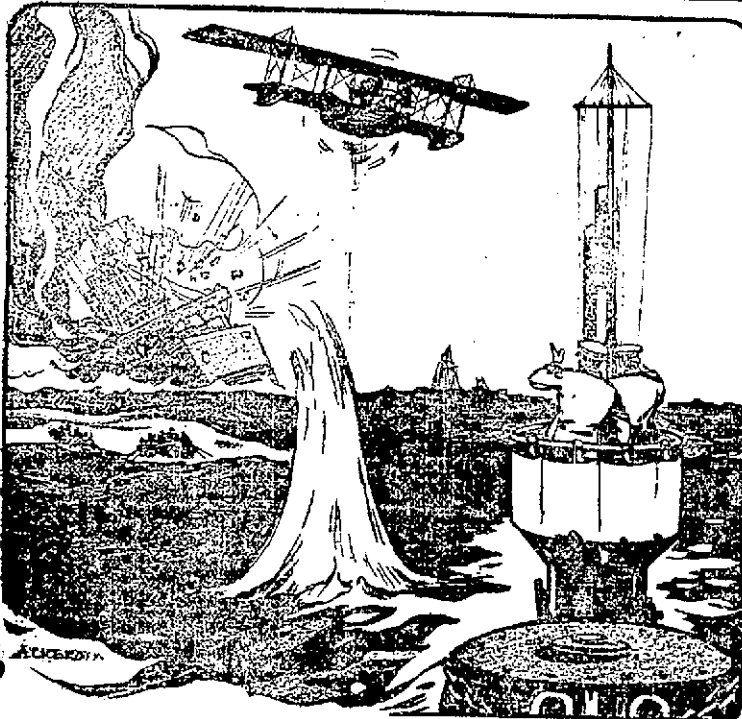

On Friday, June 11, I attended the Habeneck-Wallace show at Beloit, and to make what might be a long story, short, it was certainly as near an all-future show as I have ever seen. There were several new acts added to the already fine show of last year, and the rapid-fire way in which it was run, also added much to the entertainment.

Bud Gorman, equestrian director, is past master at the bit and it was due to his efficient work that something was doing every second. Frank Pierce, the cornet soloist, the band leader, the stager who stages the band down, also Captain Jack of Monmouth, Ill., who has been a noted band leader for years, are all worthy of mention, and after the lady with the white hair had finished their dancing act, you could hear many say, "This one act alone is worth the price of the entire show." Also Bert Hole, the announcer from one end of the canvas to the other, was brought in to give the show a new and valuable asset to any show. George Lawanda, who has been famous in the business for years, and I often heard that the clowns were the best they had ever seen.

Among these, the one that needs special mention was the old lady who seems to have a world of trouble to find her seat. Somebody had evidently given her the wrong ticket. She was working in the hippodrome track for more than an hour and never failed to make a hit.

In visiting with C. Cory, the manager, he asked all about Janesville, and he seemed delighted to know that they left a good impression here last year, and said that Janesville would be considered in 1916. The show is on its way west, showing two days in Minnesota next week and going from there westward. Mr. Cory said their permanent winter quarters had not been decided on as yet.

A one day visit with a show like this, adds one more day of sunshine.

We Saw an Aeroplane Hovering a Few Hundred Feet Above Us Like a Hawk

since a submarine cannot keep the sea for more than ten days without refueling, and since the base has been captured, there must come a speedy end to these depredations.

So much for the Courier's account of our proceedings. Another small paragraph was, however, more eloquent.

"The price of wheat," it said, "which stood at 35 shillings a week before the declaration of war, was quoted yesterday from 21 to 37, barley from 19 to 25, sugar (foreign granulated) from 11 shillings and threepence to 19 shillings and sixpence."

"Good, my lads," said I when I read it to the crew. "I can assure you that those few lines will prove to mean more than the whole page about the fall of Blankenberg. Now let us get down channel and send those prices up a little higher."

All traffic had stopped for London—not so bad for the little lota—and we did not see a steamer that was worth a torpedo between Dungeness and the Isle of Wight. There I called Stephan up by wireless, and by 7 o'clock we were actually lying side by side in a smooth, rolling sea—Hengistbury head bearing N. N. W. and about five miles distant. The two crews clustered on the whitebacks and shouted their joy at seeing friendly faces once more.

Stephan had done extraordinarily well. I had, of course, read in the London paper of his four ships on Tuesday, but he had sunk no fewer than seven since, for many of those which should have come to the Thames had tried to make Southampton. Of the seven, one was of 20,000 tons, a grain ship from America; a second was a grain ship from the Black sea, and two others were great liners from South Africa. I congratulated Stephan with all my heart upon his splendid achievement. Then, as we had been seen by a destroyer which was approaching at a great pace, we both dived, coming up again off the Needles. Where we spent the night in company. We could not visit each other since we had no boat, but we lay so nearly alongside that we were able, Stephan and I, to talk from hatch to hatch and so make our plans.

He had shot away more than half his torpedoes, and so had I, and yet we were very averse from returning to our base so long as our oil held out. I told him of my experience with the Boston steamer, and we mutually agreed to sink the ships by gunfire in future so far as possible. I remember old Horri saying, "What use is a gun aboard a submarine?" We were about to show, I read the English paper to Stephan by the light of my electric torch, and we both agreed that few ships would now come up the terrier we had caused now caused the channel. This big boat had a clever captain on board. His tactics were excellent and took him in safety to the Thames. He came zigzagging up channel at twenty-five knots, shooting off from his course at all sorts of unexpected angles. With our slow pace we could not catch him, nor could we calculate his line so as to cut him off. Of course he had never seen us, but he judged and judged rightly that wherever we were those were the tactics by which he had the best chance of getting past. He deserved his success.

But, of course, it is only in a wide channel that such things can be done. Had I met him in the mouth of the Thames there would have been a different story to tell. As I approached Falmouth I destroyed a 3,000 ton boat from Cork laden with butter and cheese.

That night (Friday, April 16) I called up Stephan, but received no reply. As I was within a few miles of our rendezvous and as he would not be cruising after dark, I was puzzled to account for his silence. I could only imagine that his wireless was deranged. But, alas, I was soon to find the true reason from a copy of the Western Morning News, which I obtained from a Brixham trawler.

ENTRY OF ITALIANS INTO WORLD'S CONFLICT INFLUENCES STYLES

Paris, June 19.—The entry of Italy into the European conflict has already shown its influence on styles. The day after the promulgation of the mobilization order many women were seen wearing the feathered hat of the "bersagliere," the Italian light infantry.

RUSSIAN BELIEVED LAWS WERE MADE IN MILWAUKEE

Monroe, Wis., June 19.—While being questioned as to the laws and practices of our country, in order to receive his second naturalization papers, Oscar Garbe, a Russian, was asked by Judge George Grimm where the laws of Wisconsin are made and answered, "Milwaukee." He was told by the judge that he must study the laws of Wisconsin before he will be granted second papers.

A. Birky of the naturalization examiners' office of Chicago was in the city yesterday to examine the applicants.

A Special Representative From Madame Irene's Fifth Avenue, New York, Corset Salon To Be Here Next Week.

Women will, no doubt, welcome the news that Madame Irene of New York is sending us her right hand assistant, Madame de Lacour, next week, to demonstrate the value of correct corseting. Madame de Lacour will give a lecture on woman is cordially invited to attend this lecture.

The store that misrepresents its merchandise is no less a liar than the man who deliberately tells you an untruth. Heretofore, in many cases this has been excused on the weak-kneed theory that "everybody's doing it."

Here we have always told the truth—through the newspaper, through our salespeople. To us the truth and the confidence that it engenders are far more important than the occasional sale negotiated through an overdrawn or equivocal statement.

Special events are almost daily occurrences in different departments throughout the store. The only publicity that these special offerings receive is through the advertisement.

tising columns of the Gazette. Some of these offerings are eagerly snapped up and the entire lot gone before night. Women who are keen and quick to buy the new seasonable articles when they are offered at special prices closely follow our advertising announcements and act on the suggestions offered.

Nowadays the store that leads the procession is the store that shows the new things first. In the short time that the Golden Eagle has been in existence it has rapidly forged to the front and women now look to us to give them the very newest things on the market as quickly as they appear.

Things are done quietly here, there's no loud noise or braggadocio; everything works along smoothly, systematically—a perfect organization working happily.

It is our aim to give perfect service in every department. Should you feel at any time that you are not getting it—please tell us.

Thrift.

A Pennsylvania girl has won the prize that the American Society for Thrift recently offered for the best definition of thrift, says the Youth's Companion. "Thrift," she wrote, "is management of your affairs in such a manner that the value of your posses-

The definition may seem trite, but the truth it expresses needs constant emphasis. Saving money on one thing to waste it on another is not thrift.

THE SHURTLEFF COMPANY SHOWS A WONDERFUL GROWTH

From Humble Beginning To Present Immense Industry
Quality Has Always Characterized Shurtleff Products.
Wonderful Processes Used In the Manufacture of Their Famous Butter and Ice Cream.

Forty years ago the best restaurants and ice cream parlors in the city were conducted by Geo. Shurtleff. His business developed rapidly and his ice cream soon became known throughout the southern part of Wisconsin. From this small beginning The Shurtleff Company came into existence and is now recognized as one of the leading industries in the list of live manufacturers.

The business is today housed in a modern two-story and basement building on South Main street, thoroughly equipped for service. The basement is devoted to the manufacture of butter where two mammoth churns having a capacity of 5,000 pounds per day are in operation.

The cream for the butter as well as for the ice cream is gathered from the surrounding country and is stored in galvanized cans and weighed as it comes fresh from the dairy farms. From these vessels it is strained into a vat of large capacity and then strained again before going into the churn. The entire work of churning the butter is done automatically and antiseptically by modern, sanitary machinery. A laboratory is maintained to determine the percentage of butter fat in each batch of cream received daily.

The dairy man is paid according to the average of butter fat in his cream. Over 300 tests of cream are made daily. The Shurtleff Butter has long enjoyed an enviable reputation and meets with a ready sale.

The Ice Cream season, which is now at its height, depends on the entire output of this modern, sanitary factory.

The plant has a capacity of 1,000 gallons per day and is able to supply any demand. Only pure cane sugar and cream are used in the making of the cream. The fruit flavorings are the best and purest procurable. The sugar and flavorings are purchased in wholesale quantities.

The second floor of the building is devoted to the manufacture of ice cream where two large "Wizard Agitators" for pasteurizing the cream are employed. These machines thoroughly mix all of the ingredients and results in leaving the cream smooth and velvety for the freezer and it maintains this smoothness after the "freeze."

The two vats where the cream is made alternate every day in making the "mix." These vats are thoroughly sterilized and antiseptized daily. The cream for tomorrow is mixed today and conducted from these vats to the freezing room on the floor below where a continuous freezer is employed.

Cream after leaving the agitators passes through the freezer into clean receptacles which are carried into the refrigerator room. This room is always kept at a temperature of zero and has a capacity of from 2,000 to 3,000 gallons of cream. Low temperature is maintained in the refrigerator room by the coil ammonia process made from Calcium brine. This brine is stored in a large vat in the basement.

Two engines of seven and twenty ton refrigerator capacity generate the refrigeration; a ton of which is equal to one ton of ice for cold-making qualities. Calcium brine is pumped through a coil of pipes to the refrigerator room where the action causes cold and genuine frost to form on the pipes and maintains a temperature of low degree.

The goods turned out by this modern plant are most of them sold within a radius of 100 miles of Janesville. Two auto trucks are employed for local delivery.

The Shurtleff building is equipped with modern offices finished in oak and nicely furnished.

One of the features of the Shurtleff industry is found in the fact that these goods advertise Janesville perhaps as thoroughly as could be done in any other way. The quality represents the high standard the industry has attained, and wherever The Shurtleff cream is used, the thought naturally reverts to the city where it is made.

The Shurtleff Company today is a close corporation and the business is still conducted by the family. Mr. Harry Shurtleff is the active manager, while his father's name appears as the president of the company. The business so well developed is the result of many years of hard, intelligent work, and the name stands as a trade-mark for honesty and fair dealing.
